Downloadable Murder Mystery Game for Forty to Two Hundred People

Trouble and tragedy in an English public school as pupils and teachers celebrate another Founder's Day.

Teachers and pupils of St. Cakes school gather to honour the memory of the blessed Bishop Cakes, who established it in 930 A.D. Prefects, nerds, bullies and sneaks all do their best to make this a day to remember – and one the headmaster would sooner forget! Everyone taking part is given a team or “house” to belong to. Some also have a guest character to play (the ambitious headgirl Charlotte Lemon, the incredibly dull science teacher Ernest Stevens, his lively wife, French teacher Fifi, and others). One of the guests will, of course, be a murderer.

The different houses compete with one another to identify who this is and are also given a “St. Cakes” challenge to tackle. Among other things, this involves the writing of a new school song. At the end, accusations are made, the murderer is identified and the winning song selected. Fancy dress is optional but strongly recommended.

The plot allows all those taking part to re-live their schooldays, mixed in with a bit of St. Trinian's, Hogwarts, Greyfriars and Malory Towers. It usually lasts about 3-3½ hours and can take place either over a meal or on its own.

Age Rating/Content Rating

This plot is suitable for groups of most types and ages. But if you are planning to run it in your school, bear in mind that characters in murder mysteries often behave badly: they kill, they tell lies, they have affairs!

When is this whodunit set?

You can choose. Life in English public schools is all about tradition. Preserving the past. Protecting pupils against all things nasty and new. Not much ever changes. Which means our St. Cakes plot works well in bygone eras as well as the modern day. So you can choose which period you set it in. While the mystery unfolds, you may need to explain a few things to make it fit the time you've selected, but nothing major needs doing.

Hire an actor

If you are in or visiting the UK and would like a professional actor to run your game for you, please look at Option 2 on this link: www.mayhem.org.uk/plots/best-value/. If you'd like a professional events company to put together the whole party for you, please go to Option 3 on the same page.

St. Cakes - Introduction

Most of the information you need to put the plot together is contained in the main game, for which you will have to pay. Before you do that, please check that your software and hardware are compatible with ours by printing out this whole document.

What is in this document?

- A summary of what our murder mystery is about.
- A list of all the guest character parts.
- An invitation.
- A copy of the School magazine and history of the School.
- Notes on how to buy your game.

What is included when you actually buy it?

- Character information for all of the guest characters.
- Speeches for a few of the guest characters to read out.
- Team information for each team.
- A step-by-step guide, explaining what the organisers need to do before and during the event, to make everything run smoothly.
- All the paper props you need: clues, coroner's reports, etc.
- The solution!

How does it work?

Designed for groups of 40-200 people, St. Cakes runs for about 3 hours and works particularly well over a meal. Two people will need to act as co-ordinators, responsible for making sure everything goes smoothly and that guests receive all the information they need. As you will see from the invitation, all the guests are supposed to be connected with St. Cakes School, either as pupils or teachers. (Fancy dress is optional, but strongly recommended.) There are six main guest characters. Everyone will be given a team or "house" to belong to. Each "house" has its own Head of House (team leader), Prefect (motivator) and Swot (the clever one). One of the guests will, of course, be a murderer.

To help find out who this person is, every house is given a few clues soon after the first murder happens. They use the clues they have to trade and barter with other houses, in the hope of ending up with a full set. They also have a "St. Cakes Challenge" to complete, for which they will be asked to write (and perhaps perform) a new school song.

As proceedings draw to a close, the different houses get the opportunity to make their accusations then the correct solution is revealed and the murderer is unmasked.

Who has taken part in the game before?

We have been running murder mysteries professionally in the UK since 1989. Hundreds of blue-chip businesses have booked us, and a list of satisfied corporate customers is on this link to the website of our Murder Mystery and Mayhem sister company:

www.mayhem.org.uk/about-us/

Please do not think, however, that you can just download the game and let it run itself. By getting it at a much lower price than it usually sells for, you will obviously have to put in some work to make it a real success. If you want us to organise and run it all for you, please e-mail us c/o info@mayhem.org.uk and we will tell you what we provide and what we charge. Or look us up at www.mayhem.org.uk/

St. Cakes School Slang

St. Cakes A History

St. Cakes has been a seat of learning since AD 930, when Bishop Cakes founded an “educational establishment for those miraculously cured of leprosy” here, shortly before succumbing to the disease himself.

Keen that others should share his love of learning, he carried a stick with him which he used to beat anyone he met who had no knowledge of Latin. Poor eyesight and an abysmal memory meant he couldn’t speak a word of it either, and he would spend hours each day hitting himself on the head with his own stick.

After the Bishop’s death, the school changed its admissions policy and welcomed children from all backgrounds, provided their parents paid for a year’s education in advance. On arriving at the school, new students were obliged to kiss a holy relic called “Ye Toe of Ye Bishop”. Most succumbed to leprosy within weeks. Oddly enough, this made parents even keener to send their children there.

The first person of any note to be educated at St. Cakes was John Hogge (1417-1467). Known as John the Red-Legged because of the colour his lower limbs turned in cold weather, he claimed he was the bastard child of Henry V. In the winter of 1467, he gathered a small army together and marched on London to “seize his birthright”. At the gates of London, he became scared after seeing a man on a horse. He sat down in a field and refused to move. He succumbed to hypothermia seven hours later.

St. Cakes next made an impact on world affairs in 1722. A pupil called Philip Braithwaite claimed he possessed the larynx of a sheep. The noises he made were, indeed, very sheep-like. Doctors who examined him found large amounts of grass in his gullet. Local people soon began regarding him as some sort of sacred healer, and many miracle cures were attributed to the power of his bleating. He died of malnutrition in 1723.

Over the past 200 years, the school has been noted for two main achievements: its regular run-ins with the country’s top universities over their refusal to accept any of its pupils as students and its “make them suffer” approach to education. Until girls were first admitted in 1986, the summer uniform consisted of four pairs of horsehair trousers, four shirts and four jackets worn over each other. The uniform in winter was a cotton loincloth.

Today, thanks to its present headmaster Raymond Ashmole, the school is a shining example of pedagogy at its very best. Teachers, facilities and equipment are all of the highest standard. Although no pupil has made it to university yet, Mr. Ashmole is confident that the present headgirl, Charlotte Lemon, will succeed next year. “There is no stopping her. Whatever she wants, she gets,” he says, with deep pride. “We have no doubt the future of this school will be just as distinguished as its past.”
