

The Reading of the Will

Downloadable Murder Mystery Game for Six to Eight people

The Duke of Felthorpe seems to have been murdered in his bath. But how? The room is locked from the inside.

The Reading of the Will is a 'sealed room' murder mystery. After the Duke of Felthorpe dies in his bathroom, no one can gain entry except by breaking the door down. So how did his killer get in there? It looks impossible.

Everyone taking part in this crime game plays a character who works for or is related to the Duke. All of them are here for the reading of his Last Will and Testament. The contents of the Will are a big surprise. So many last-minute changes. Was he being blackmailed? Was he mad? Should this Will be thrown out and replaced with an earlier one?

The murder mystery usually takes place during a meal but can be run without one. Fresh clues are introduced as the plot gradually unravels and more evidence emerges. One character is the duke's butler. So, did the usual happen? Did the butler do it? Or was it the Duke's maid? The Duke's idiot son, perhaps? His son's scheming wife?

Before all is revealed, everyone gets the chance to say who they think the guilty party is. By the time the truth is out, everyone will have had great fun playing their parts, working out whodunit and trying to prevent other people from accusing them.

Age Rating/Content Rating

Although some of the characters behave badly, we don't believe the plot contains anything that would cause offence to most people. But, because those under the age of 14 may have trouble understanding some things mentioned in it, we recommend it as suitable for those aged 14 and above.

When is this whodunit set?

The Reading of the Will is set in the modern day but has a very "period feel" to it. You can, if you prefer, set it in a previous era: the Thirties, Forties, Fifties, Sixties, Seventies, Eighties, Nineties, Noughties. You will need to add the era you've chosen to the invitations and do a small amount of explaining on the night. But there is nothing to stop you going back in time, if you want to.

A summary of the game

“The Reading of the Will” is a murder mystery for 6-8 people. Each of them is a character in the plot. It is usually run over a meal, with the person hosting the party also playing one of the characters.

Four characters are male and four are female, but don't worry if you don't have the right male/female split. Getting men to play women or women to play men generally adds to the fun!

While the mystery unravels, guests question each other (in character) and try to discover what everyone has been getting up to. Information about their own character and clues about the others are given to them, and new plot developments occur while the mystery progresses.

As proceedings draw to a close, people get the chance to make their accusations, then the correct solution is revealed and the murderer is unmasked.

The Felthorpe Bugle

Tragic Death of His Grace, the Duke of Felthorpe

It is with great sadness we must report the tragic death of Maurice Didlington, 18th Duke of Felthorpe. His Grace was found dead in his home yesterday morning, following a domestic accident. The full details have yet to be made public, but it is understood that His Grace suffered an electric shock while taking a bath.

A member of his household staff discovered him slumped in the bath and made valiant efforts to revive him - sadly, to no avail.

Tributes to the duke have been pouring in to this newspaper, ever since word of his demise began to spread. Many people in Felthorpe clearly held the duke in deep affection. Wreaths are already piling up outside the ducal home, Felthorpe Manor.

The duke's title will now pass to his fine son, Monty.

*The Duke of Felthorpe,
R.I.P.*

An interesting local character who will be much missed.

Also in this issue:

Help "If we don't help them, will they help themselves?" The late duke explains why he often employed ex-convicts.

Missing A week prior to his death, the duke told police that large sums of money had disappeared from his bank account. The police are still investigating.

The life, the man

Born the Right Honourable Maurice Didlington on the first of May, 1951, the duke was an only child. He spent his early years being cared for by a succession of nannies and was, by all accounts, a delightful little boy who always had a deep respect for his elders and a certain knowledge of his place. At the age of eleven, he was accepted into Eton College, where he went on to make a name for himself as a fine oarsman and clay modeller.

He married Fleur Adcock, youngest daughter of the Earl of Stitchfield, in 1978. After bearing him two children, Fleur died in a riding accident in 1978 and the duke never re-married.

He became duke in 1986 after the death of his father, Horace. He will be much missed.
